Hankering for a road trip during recent periods of isolation and lockdown, Andrea has created a series of paintings that explore the natural environment and invite the viewer to pause and reflect.

The series of roadside views, symbolise a path forward, a journey ahead, the optimism in “heading out” and the anticipation of returning home.

"The Heading Out, Coming Home series, first began during road trips to visit my dad, who lived an hour and a half drive from me. I would stop and take photos of roadside vistas and reflect on life and its gifts.

These trips, often made by myself, offered an opportunity of reflection. Unfortunately my dad passed away at the beginning of 2020, which made my road trips redundant. So, during our long sessions of lockdown, longing for a road trip, I created a body of work using my photograph references.

The series of familiar roadside views, symbolise a path forward, a journey ahead, or the optimism and anticipation of returning home."

Throughout a long career of teaching Art in Secondary Schools, Andrea has maintained her own Arts practice from her art studio/gallery in Berwick. Andrea holds weekly classes and workshops and creates works using a wide range of mediums, including; clay, wire, pastel, oil and acrylic.
